

What Is the Hawaiian Airlines Baggage Policy in 2026?

Hawaiian Airlines Baggage Policy

Introduction

The Hawaiian Airlines baggage policy explains the rules passengers must follow when carrying personal belongings, cabin bags, and checked luggage. Understanding these requirements before departure helps travelers prepare appropriately and avoid unexpected airport charges. Passengers should verify the latest baggage requirements before packing.

Know Your Carry-On Allowance

Carry-on baggage allows passengers to keep essential belongings with them during the flight. Under Hawaiian Airlines' traditional carry-on rules, passengers generally may bring one carry-on bag and one personal item, subject to applicable requirements.

Always confirm the current allowance for your specific flight before departure.

Carry-On Size and Weight Restrictions

Size limits help ensure that cabin luggage fits safely in the aircraft's storage spaces. Hawaiian Airlines' published carry-on guidance has traditionally specified maximum dimensions of 22 × 14 × 9 inches, including wheels and handles.

Check the latest official size and weight rules because requirements may vary by itinerary or aircraft.

Hawaiian Airlines Checked Baggage Allowance

Checked baggage is suitable for larger suitcases, clothing, and belongings that passengers do not need during the flight. The Hawaiian Airlines baggage policy determines how many checked bags are included with a ticket and what charges may apply. Review the allowance shown in your reservation to understand what is included in your booking.

Checked Baggage Weight Limits

Weight restrictions help airline staff handle luggage safely and ensure compliance with baggage regulations. Hawaiian Airlines has traditionally used a 50-pound standard maximum for many checked bags, although applicable limits and exceptions depend on the itinerary and passenger eligibility.

Confirm the current limit for your route to avoid repacking or unexpected charges at check-in.

Oversized and Extra Baggage Fees

Travelers carrying additional suitcases or unusually large items should review the applicable charges before departure. Fees can depend on the route, number of bags, dimensions, weight, and ticket conditions.

Check the airline's current fee schedule instead of relying on outdated online prices.

Restricted Items and Liquids

Passengers must follow aviation security rules when packing liquids, aerosols, batteries, and other restricted items. Some items are permitted only in cabin baggage, while others must be packed in checked luggage or are prohibited entirely.

Security requirements may differ by departure airport and international destination, so review the relevant rules before traveling.

Sports Equipment and Special Baggage

Hawaii attracts travelers carrying surfboards, golf clubs, diving equipment, and other recreational gear. These items may be accepted under special baggage rules rather than the standard suitcase allowance.

Confirm acceptance requirements and charges before taking specialized equipment to the airport.

Baggage Rules for Families and Special Travelers

Families, frequent flyers, and passengers requiring special assistance should check whether additional baggage provisions apply to their journey.

- Mobility aids and medically necessary equipment may be covered by special policies.
- Passengers traveling on partner airlines should check which carrier's baggage rules apply.
- Eligible loyalty members or premium-cabin passengers may receive additional checked baggage allowances.
- Strollers and child safety equipment may have separate handling rules.
- Infants and children may have specific baggage entitlements depending on their ticket and itinerary.

Passengers should contact the airline in advance when transporting unusual or oversized items.
